POOL IS DISSOLVED.

Say That Traders Still Need About $6,000,000.

New York, Oct. 28.—The bankers pool, which under the direction of J. P. Morgan, loaned over $30,000,000 on the stock exchange last Thursday and Friday, was dissolved today and the loan accounts distributed to the banks participating. The loans, it is learned, have not been called.

Call money opened today at 12 per cent.

The First National bank renewed its loans made last week at 30 per cent and subsequently other call loans were made at the latter rate.

Prices of stocks sagged somewhat when it became understood that the banks would deal directly with stock exchange borrowers instead of through a pool. Money loaned at 5 per cent and there was some calling of loans. The reaction reduced the earlier gains materially and some active stocks yielded terially and some active stocks yielded to below Saturday's level.

At 2:30 p. m., call money was loaned on the stock exchange at 60 per cent. Experienced brokers declared that the traders were in need of about $6,000,000

The collection was given to the museum by a leading European authority on ants, Prof. August Forel of Switzerland, who is also a leading authority on nervous diseases and one of the principal advocates of total abstinence in Europe. These ants constitute a valuable addition to the collection in the museum made by Dr. William Morton Wheeler, curator of the department of invertebrate zoology, in the last six or seven years, which is the largest in existence. It contains one-half of the described species and about 100,000 specimens. Regarding the value of this gift to the museum and the curious and almost human characteristics of some of these ants, Dr. Wheeler said: "Ants are not attractive as a collection of specimens, but they are exceedingly interesting from two points of view:"
